1.  The Rostock Diesel works delivered three standard Diesel engines and two two-cycle Diesel engines to China in February 1954. The plant has to manufacture, altogether, 9 engines of these types by June 1954, and two more are planned for July 1954. Total production of standard Diesel engines in February 1954 was four.

2.  The plant has or raises of funds totaling two million marks for capital investment. A new power plant is urgently needed, also new boiler installations. Part of the funds are for new construction, because a new two-cycle Diesel engine is to be put into production at the end of 1954. When the money will be available and when the new construction will begin is not yet known.
